Dako Worldwide Transport and Lysander Shipping in teamwork for Dalian shipment

GPLN members Dako Worldwide Transport from Germany and Lysander Shipping from Italy partnered to move a 272-ton double-action hot extrusion machine from Italy to Dalian, China. The machine was both heavy and large, occupying 1,000 cubic meters. It will be used to produce a variety of long, uniformly thin items, from window sashes to industrial components. Considering the large dimensions of the cargo, it was immediately apparent that road permits and special transport would be required. After completing a route survey, Dako Worldwide Transport and Lysander Shipping decided that transport to Porto Maghera would be the safer option, offering a shorter distance from the shipper to the port, without any hills, bridges or natural obstacles along the way. The GPLN project specialists negotiated with breakbulk carriers, and once confirmed, heavy-lift special transport, terminal operators and road permits were arranged and booked. Haulage from the plant to Porto Maghera spanned four days. The extrusion machine was then loaded on CP Cosmas and sailed for Dalian where it arrived on schedule.
